

$655,000,000 Naval Building Program Is Given Approval

Would Build 21 Warships, 22 Auxiliary Vessels and Boost Air Force to 4,500 Planes

Air Warning

Urges National Air-Raid Warning System, More Seacoast Defense

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP).—The House naval committee tentatively approved today a two-year building program to cost approximately $655,000,000.

The revamped program, described by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) as "all the navy can build in two years," would authorize construction of 21 additional warships, 22 auxiliary vessels and boost the navy's minimum air strength to 4,500 planes.

When the fleet expansion program first was presented it called for eventual appropriation of $1,300,000,000 to provide for 77 warships and the same number of aircraft carriers and auxiliaries.

The army, sidetracking proposals for increasing its manpower, is going to concentrate on completing sea-coast defenses, establishing a national air-raid warning system, and getting additional modern equipment for its troops.

Members of the House military committee said that Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, told them yesterday a $40,000,000 item, chiefly for creation of an air-raid warning system, was of the "first priority" among navy needs.

Details of the system were withheld, but members said it would include a radio set-up and sirens. Testifying behind closed doors, Marshall told the committee, members said, that the army wanted $300,000,000 for construction and completion of sea-coast defenses and $240,000,000 for so-called "critical" equipment needs.

One committee member said that all of these funds would be sought in the forthcoming war department appropriation bill.

Committee members said Marshall told them that he was opposed to increasing the army and national guard beyond 480,000 men at this time.

Marshall was quoted as saying he might ask funds for an additional 15,000 men to fill out certain units to provide six regular divisions, exclusive of troops in Panama and in territorial possessions.

93,000 Killed

That Was Toll of Accidents in United States in '39; Injured 8,800,000

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Accidents killed 93,000 persons in the United States in 1939, injured 8,800,000 and cost an estimated $3,300,000,000, the National Safety Council reported today.

Those figures, however, represented a saving of about 800 lives and a one per cent reduction from the 1938 toll. The 1939 accident rate of 71 deaths per 100,000 population was the lowest since 1900 with two exceptions—1921 and 1922.

Leading the list were motor vehicle accidents, which accounted for 32,600 deaths, 18 more than in 1938, and caused approximately 1,150,000 non-fatal injuries. Economic losses were estimated at $1,500,000,000.

Ranking second were accidents in the home. They killed 32,000 persons in 1939, two per cent more than in 1938, injured 4,700,000 and cost an estimated $800,000,000. Falls were blamed for 17,000 of the home accidents.

Occupational deaths decreased three per cent to 16,000 and the miscellaneous accident toll decreased six per cent to 15,000.

Fire Loss Here During Last Year Was $28,387,000

Decrease of $64,463 From 1938 Loss—Two Fatalities in Fires Here—Responded to 380 Calls

New Buildings In City Totaled 535

During 1939 Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy issued 535 building permits in Kingston as compared with 507 permits issued in 1938, according to his report submitted Tuesday evening to the board of fire commissioners at the Central Fire Station. The fire loss per capita for 1939 was $1.01. The fire department responded to 380 calls during the past year.

The total insurance carried on buildings and contents involved in fire was $491,912.96. The loss by fire was 5.77 per cent of the total insurance carried.

The fire chief in his report pointed out that although there had been a decrease in property fire loss in 1939, there had been two tragic deaths and several persons suffered severe burns.

The annual report follows: "In compliance with Chapter 704 of the Laws of 1907 and in order to comply with Chapter 611 of the Laws of 1915, I have the honor and pleasure of submitting for your honorable board's approval the 31st annual report of the fire department.

The fire department closed the year of 1939 with an increase in the number of fires and a decrease in the fire loss. The number of fire calls responded to in the city was 350, an increase of 32 over 1938. We answered 13 emergency calls, making a total of 380 calls for the year of 1939. The insurance loss for 1939 was $28,387,000, a decrease from the 1938 loss of $28,451,463.30. The loss in 1938 was $92,850.35. The total insurance carried on building and contents involved in fire was $491,912.96. The loss by fire was 5.77 per cent of the total insurance carried.

The fire chief in his report pointed out that although there had been a decrease in property fire loss in 1939, there had been two tragic deaths and several persons suffered severe burns. One life was worth more than any insurance loss no matter how great, but the public soon forgets, with the thought, it was an accident, it cannot happen to me. What has happened can and might happen again. Can we do anything to prevent this loss of life especially in the home?

Yes, we can do much to cut down the loss of life, which is so horrible when the cause is attributed to fire. Since the fact that the home is safe from fire, it is very important that the head of every household have some plans as to what he or she would do if awakened in the dead of night by fire. This procedure is necessary if you are to protect the lives of the members of your family. Gather your family around the table, lay plans for a fire drill in your home. Explain what happens should a fire start in the cellar. You say what would or could happen? Well let me explain some of the few things that might happen.

Fires usually start in the cellar or closet and in most cases from preventable cause. Fires of this nature burn slowly, giving off smoke and gas. The bedroom doors being closed and the windows open the fire burns undetected for some time. The smoke and hot gases travel to the uppermost section of the stairs and hall, bank against the ceiling and return down the stair well to the lower floor. It is then reheated until it becomes a superheated gas and builds up a pressure in the hall. This slow burning fire is now starving for oxygen waiting for a little inrush of air to stimulate it so that it may strike its deadly blow. The opening of a bedroom door would furnish enough oxygen to cause a flash of this superheated gas which would involve the entire home in fire. Therefore, if awakened by the odor of smoke, never open your bedroom door quickly. Always open the door with the foot against the door, open the window at the bottom of the door and your hand at the small opening, be sure you keep your face away from the opening. This precaution is very vital for the fact that if there should be a pressure built up in the hall you will be able to close the door. If there is no excess heat or pressure then open the door and arouse the members of your family. If the stairway is burning or heavily charged with smoke, do not attempt to leave the building by the stairs. Go to the room furthest from the fire, close the door, open the window and call for help. If you live in an apartment house on the second or third floor and your one and only exit is cut off by fire, I appeal to you to go to a window, close your door and stay at the window so that the firemen can locate and rescue you. Never wander from one room to another. Remember one very important thing, once out of the building stay out. It is not necessary that you come in contact with the actual flame, all that is required is that you inhale some of this hot gas, which will cause suffocation and death.

The total approximate estimate of the cost of new building additions, alterations and repairs to existing buildings was $465,499.00.

Chamberlain Assures United States and Japan That Britain Is Anxious to Avoid Friction With Them and Other Neutrals

Hitler's Speech Is Seen as Heralding War to Utmost

Prompt Boom in Bitterness of War Predicted of the Strength of Fuchrer's Declaration

Sinking Ships

Germany Says 18 British Vessels Off Britain Coast Destroyed

Berlin, Jan. 31 (AP).—A prompt boom in the bitterness of the war was predicted by German commentators today on the strength of Adolf Hitler's declaration that "England and France will get the fight they asked for."

Hitler's own Volkischer Beobachter stressed this quotation in a page-one headline over its account of his impromptu seventh-anniversary address in the Sports Palace last night.

Observers detected a note of reliance on Soviet Russia and Italy, when he said the Russian ties made Germany's position safe "from the rear" and that the Reich was buttressed by unchanged, "close friendship" with Italy.

"In our battle for national existence, we have grown so strong that nothing any longer will be able to defeat us," Hitler declared.

His closest approach to definition of Germany's war aims was the general remark that the Reich was fighting for "justice and the right to live."

Hitler spoke at a rousing Nazi rally of 25,000 picked demonstrators to mark the anniversary of his accession to the German chancellorship January 30, 1933, but the occasion seemed so far removed from the traditional fanfare.

Until Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels made the introduction the uninitiated and radio listeners in Germany and abroad did not know where the meeting was being held.

The dark, snowy streets of blacked-out Berlin were devoid of demonstrations. (Noises frequently interrupted reception of the speech in the United States, and some American radio engineers said they believed this was due to "deliberate jamming" from some unidentified source.)

Immediately after Hitler's address, force was given to his words by the semi-official announcement that German fliers had destroyed seven more British merchant ships and damaged or destroyed other vessels.

Germany's Relations
In this, the German leader's first formal address since he so narrowly escaped death in the Munich beer cellar explosion of November 8, Hitler portrayed Germany's relations as follows:

"Great Britain and France: "In 1939, the western powers dropped the mask and sent Germany a declaration of war, despite all our attempts at an understanding. "Today they admit an understanding with Poland might have been possible, but they did not want it. They wanted war. I can only tell England and France, they will get the fight they asked for."

England, he said, "always has followed the aim of preventing the consolidation of Europe, just as France for centuries prevented the consolidation of Germany."

To the accompaniment of cheers and applause, the gray-uniformed Hitler heaped scorn upon "old Mr. Chamberlain, Britain's prime minister; Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty; and France's Premier Daladier and 'French generals.'"

Soviet Russia: "For the past year I have tried to remove the possibility of this war's expanding into a general one. Chamberlain then was anxious for an understanding with Russia. Today our enemies are furious that I did what they attempted, namely, to arrive at that understanding. I believe the Almighty God will be satisfied that a senseless conflict in one area was averted."

Through centuries Germany and Russia were friends—why not now? "As a result of my efforts, we now have our back clear. We have nothing to worry about any longer from the rear on account of our alliance with Russia."

Italy: "For years Germany has pursued a common policy with Italy. This policy has not changed. Both states are intimate friends. Their common interests can be reduced to a common denominator."

Increasing Labor Support for Governor's Budget, New Taxes

Mine Workers Put Third Term Issue Up to Union Board

Columbus, O., Jan. 31 (AP).—The resolutions committee of the United Mine Workers of America convention today recommended that action on 47 resolutions urging a third term for President Roosevelt be referred to the international executive board for consideration.

In a resolution designed as a substitute for the 47, the committee said: "We hold and believe the only sensible, sane and proper course is to refer the entire subject matter to the international executive board for appropriate action and such reasonable finance support as circumstances may warrant at the proper time in support of the program that may be agreed upon and worked in cooperation with labor's non-partisan league."

The committee also said that "the New Deal social and democratic program of the present administration has not been consummated."

"During the period from 1933 to 1937 headway was made, for which this organization was and is grateful, as evidenced by the tactical and effective action of our convention of 1936 when we pledged our moral and gave substantial financial support to the Democratic campaign of that year," it added.

The resolutions committee action was anticipated after UMW President John L. Lewis suggested to the convention that it refrain from making any presidential endorsements. He also vigorously criticized the New Deal and predicted that if President Roosevelt were renominated he would go down to "ignominious defeat."

In the 1935-39 session of Congress, the resolutions committee added, "a coalition clique put not only a stop to New Deal legislation but weakened and destroyed many of the New Deal legislative acts such as WPA wages and appropriations which were reduced."

What the UMW termed a shift in certain policies of the National Labor Relations Board was regarded by leaders today as a serious threat to their union's welfare.

Puzzled by 'Famine'
Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP).—Japan's self-imposed electric power "famine" reached a critical stage today, as manufacturers stood to lose millions of dollars and workers expressed bewilderment over enforced idleness. The partial shutdown begun yesterday for a proposed 14-hour period was expected to continue in the industrialized areas of Kobe, Kyoto and Osaka and newspapers reported the order would be applied in Tokyo and Yokohama.

Pari-Mutuel Supporters Draft 'Compromise Bill' to Permit Betting Machines

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP).—Increasing labor support for Governor Lehman's $396,700,000 budget and new tax program developed today as legislative leaders determined to put the next move up to the taxpayers.

Already approved by the American Labor party, the 1940-41 spending plan was labelled agreeable "in the main" by the State Industrial Council, C. I. O., which protested however, the financial program "does not go far enough."

As party chieftains shelved financial problems until the budget hearing, February 12, pari-mutuel supporters in the legislature drafted a "compromise" bill that would permit installation of betting machines at horse race tracks this spring.

Submission of the measure, designed to eliminate features of the Dunningham bill calling for four more tracks and enlargement of the five existing structures, awaited completion of the budget hearing.

Approval of a pari-mutuel bill was regarded likely because of the state's need for revenues. Contrasting with renewed bombardment from taxpayer organizations demanding budget cuts ranging from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000, Gustave A. Strebel, state C. I. O. president, asserted the result of last year's economies was "to throw an unsupportable burden on the poorer communities."

The council, however, recommended a "modification" of the proposed steepening of the present income tax scale, expected to raise $15,000,000, to exempt the lowest bracket from an additional levy. It advocated taxing the highest brackets "according to the principle of ability to pay."

"The people of this state are thoroughly aroused at the damage already done to the school system, highways and other public services by the cuts put through the legislature last year," Strebel added. Meantime, the committee of 100 of Yonkers, Inc., submitted to legislative leaders a "four-point economy program" proposing elimination of new taxes, a reduction in state aid for education, suspension of mandatory salary increases for civil service employees, and, "if necessary," salary cuts to eliminate need of a new impost.

Gates M. Minckler, president of the Genesee education board, also argued against resumption of full state aid for education.

Fandino Pleads Not Guilty to Drunken Driving

Antina Fandino, 46, of Glascow, pleaded not guilty to charges of operating a bus on Broadway while intoxicated and of leaving the scene of an accident, when arraigned before Judge Raymond Mino in police court today. At Fandino's request the hearing in both cases was adjourned to February 7, and bail of $200 was continued.

Fandino is accused of operating one of the buses of the Ferraro Saugerties-Kingston line, on Broadway, while intoxicated on Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock. He is also accused of crashing into a parked automobile on Broadway, near St. James street, and not stopping to ascertain what damage had been done.

Lee Coddington, 27, who has a furnished room at 77 Foxhall avenue, was arrested Tuesday evening by Officer Murphy on a warrant charging Coddington with larceny, growing out of a check transaction. Coddington was later turned over to Corporal Baker of the State Troopers for arraignment in Cooperstown.

Finns March On

Report Finns Recapture the Important City of Pitkaranta

(By The Associated Press)

A picture of "prodigious results" produced by Britain's war preparations was drawn today by Prime Minister Chamberlain who announced a German submarine was sunk when it attempted to attack a naval convoy yesterday.

Discussing the nation's war effort which has brought more than 1,250,000 men under arms, Chamberlain hastened to assure the United States and Japan that Britain was anxious to avoid friction with them and other neutrals which might grow out of the war.

British aircraft construction is seven times greater than it was four years ago, he said at a national defense committee luncheon. Later in the House of Commons Chamberlain announced that the admiralty tomorrow would take over control of all British merchant ship-building and repairs during the war.

Italy received Hitler's speech without comment and British spokesmen said it was evident that Hitler had given up hope of separating the British-French allies.

Hitler's verbal attack on the allies accompanied further assaults by Nazi planes on shipping and other relations with them and the Germans claimed 15 vessels had been sunk in two days of raids and that only one German plane was lost.

From the Finnish-Russian war front unofficial reports said the Finns had recaptured the important city of Pitkaranta, 30 miles from the Soviet frontier north of Lake Ladoga, focus of intense fighting for more than a week.

Anxious to Avoid Friction
London, Jan. 31 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the United States and Japan today that Britain was anxious to avoid friction or disturbance in her trade and other relations with them and with other neutrals in the war against Germany.

Addressing a luncheon of the national defense committee, the prime minister expressed regret that the concentration of dollar resources in America for munitions and other war supplies had forced curtailment of purchases of other products there.

One of Britain's foremost aims of the war, he said, is to return to normal trade among nations. Of the British-Japanese dispute over the seizure by a British warship of 21 Germans from the Japanese.

Television System Which Increases Television Range From 50-1,000 Miles Found

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Radio Corporation of America has found the "missing link in television"—system increasing television range from 50 to 1,000 miles.

David Sarnoff, RCA president, said the development would make possible a network linking New York with such cities as Washington and Boston, and that with further technical improvements would raise the present 50-mile limit to coast-to-coast broadcasts.

Sarnoff emphasized the system is only the entering wedge to opening up such long-range telecasts. He added that putting it into effect hinges on rulings of the Federal Communications Commission, which is considering whether to enforce tentatively adopted rules permitting a limited commercial sponsorship of television programs.

Last week, the FCC completed hearings in Washington and tomorrow will start a television inspection tour embracing New York, Albany, Schenectady, Poughkeepsie and Philadelphia. RCA engineers said the development differs from other methods by making use of specially-designed relay stations which operate on frequencies many times higher than those used by regular television broadcasting studios.

Sarnoff said the relay stations need no attendants and are "not very expensive."

Jesse Jones Is Summoned To Testify on Loan Issue

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, was summoned by the Senate foreign relations committee to testify today on legislation to increase the capital of the Export-Import Bank by $100,000,000 in order to facilitate a $20,000,000 loan to Finland.

Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) said representatives of the state department would be asked to appear before the committee later. The committee agreed, informally, Pittman said, to delay action on pending resolutions to give the President power to restrict exports to Japan until after disposition of the Finnish matter. The chairman, meanwhile, named a subcommittee composed of Senators George (D-Ga.), chairman, Van Nuys (D-Ind.), and Johnson (R-Calif.) to study a resolution by Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) which would set congressional machinery in motion to invoke the neutrality act in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

Discussing the Finnish legislation, Pittman said "the committee decided, without a formal vote, that the financial and legal question involved were so interwoven that one could not be considered without the other." At the White House Colonel Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, said after a talk with President Roosevelt that he "wouldn't" be at all surprised if some plan was worked out for purchase of Finnish bonds in this country.

Knox said he discussed "Finnish relief" with Mr. Roosevelt. "Editorially," Knox said, "I have been very loudspoken on behalf of loans that would be helpful to them (the Finns). There are some plans in the making, even if they do not come from Congress. What the Finns need is military and not civilian supplies."

Knox, who stopped here on the way to Palm Beach, Fla., for a vacation, lunched yesterday with Hjalmar Procopé, the Finnish minister.

"Liquor" on Air Reported Tabooed

Broadcasting of liquor is banned, according to word received by the Ulster County Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

The parties interested have been informed to that effect. The ABC board office stated it was understood that there is no objection to the broadcasting of wines and malt beverages.

Stores Set Record
Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP)—The world's two largest merchandise distributing organizations, Alars Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, today closed a record breaking fiscal year in which they sold more than $1,100,000,000 worth of goods. This volume of sales, an increase of approximately 19 per cent over that of the previous fiscal period, was equal to about three per cent of the total amount of United States retail trade in 1938.

U. S. Steel Report Issued on Tuesday

Report of U. S. Steel was issued Tuesday, coming after the close of the market. Results did not more than come up minimum expectations. With shipments of finished steel at 84.3 per cent of capacity in the final quarter of 1939, net profits after all deductions totaled $28,835,282, equivalent to $2.59 a share on common. It is noted that shipments in the final quarter of '39 were only about 100,000 lower than in the second quarter of 1938, yet profits amounted to $3.43 a share on common in the 1937 period. The difference is laid to poorer prices, with operating costs fixed, if not slightly higher, in the latest period. For the full year 1939 deliveries were at the rate of 59.5 per cent, approximately 60 per cent above 1938. Net profits for last year, as a whole, were $41,226,039, equal to $1.84 a share on common. A regular quarterly dividend of $7.5 a share was declared on the preferred stock, but no action was taken on common.

Inland Steel reports net for 1939 of $10,947,251, or $6.74 a share on common shares outstanding, against net of $4,916,203, or $3.12 a share in 1938. Final quarter showed net of $2.81 a share. A dividend of $1 a share was declared.

Republic Steel is expected to show better than $1 a share earned in the final quarter of 1939, with profits of $1.40 a share on common for the entire year. Company had loss of $7,997,825 in 1938. Meanwhile the stock market continued its sagging tendencies, although changes in the Dow Jones averages were slight with the exception of industrials, which were off .63 point for the day, to 145.63. Rails showed more resistance and the average was up slightly, .03, to 30.72, and utilities were off about the same amount, .02, to close at 24.93. Lof, Inc., was one of 11 stocks that made new highs during the day; Lehigh Portland Cement, preferred, made a new low. Volume was 550,000 shares.

Commodities were steadier, with the index up 20 point from Monday. With foreign markets stronger cotton advanced and closed four to ten points higher. Wheat touched new lows for the movement in early trading, but rebounded and closed at Chicago unchanged to 1/2 of a cent abashed higher. Corn declined 1/4 cent.

Despite weakness in the primary markets, futures were depressed by the news. In Tokyo the speculative bubble which developed in silk futures after outbreak of the war, with expectations of a U. S. war boom has been broken in recent weeks, as the direct results of governmental control steps, and in the last three weeks the price of silk futures has tumbled 36 per cent.

Value of agricultural exports during 1939 was $656,000,000 lowest total in a number of years and behind 1938 by $172,000,000.

Indications are that car loadings for last week were around 650,000 cars, a more than seasonal gain, with increased coal shipments a factor.

Some 1939 net earnings: du Pont, net of $93,218,664, or $7.70 a share, vs. $50,190,827, or $3.79 a share in 1938. Southern Railway, net of $6,487,336, $2.69 a share, vs. loss of $487,772 in preceding year. Butler Bros., $1,347,749, 83 cents a share, vs. $718,908, or 28 cents a share. Atlas Powder, $1,299,137, vs. $1,013,056 in 1938.

United Mine Workers convention unanimously approved a change that the NLRB was undermining basic Wagner Act principles, thus reversing their stand taken at the 1938 convention.

The cold weather is expanding demand for fuel oil and stocks on hand declined 2,748,000 barrels last week.

The government has discontinued its subsidy to stimulate exports of raw cotton.

Zunis Practice 'Share Wealth'

Culture Featured by Entire Absence of Forms of Direct Aggression.

NEW YORK. — A "share the wealth" custom is practiced by the Zuni Indians of New Mexico, a peace-loving tribe numbering about 2,000, according to Dr. Ruth R. Bunzel of the department of anthropology of Columbia university, in a report of a recent study of the Indians. Zuni culture, Dr. Bunzel says, is featured by the complete absence of forms of direct aggression such as war, murder, and rape.

The Zuni pueblo near Santa Fe has no police or jail, and no organized means of exerting force. An agrarian culture without an unemployment problem, their civilization shows no evidence of a class struggle. An Indian accumulating more wealth than his neighbor distributes his surplus through feasts and ceremonies.

"Drinking, brawling, and indeed nearly every form of open conflict are seldom found in the tribe," declares Dr. Bunzel, who at intervals during the past 14 years has lived with the Zuni. "There has never been a murder committed within the memory of any of the Indians questioned."

They Share the Surplus.
"There is little chance for one member of the tribe to accumulate wealth at the expense of others because of well-developed institutions for sharing any surplus. Neither do the Indians hesitate to distribute any excess goods or food. They are more than anxious to receive the intangible advantages of prestige, security and religious blessing which accompany the act. Consequently the Zuni live in a culture of peace and security that is lacking in more competitive civilizations."

Seeking the basis for the non-aggressiveness of the Zuni, Dr. Bunzel studied the methods of child training followed by the tribe. Children, she found, are taught to obey rules for the sake of society rather than in recognition of parental authority. Family life exists on a large scale, and close bonds of affection between children and parents are present.

"The Zuni are extremely indulgent toward their very young. The children, on the other hand, seldom misbehave, on any noticeable extent. Contrary to the usual conception of the Indian as an aloof, unbending personality, the Zuni give their children all the affection they need. The child is seldom thwarted and consequently grows up in an atmosphere of nearly free of frustration as possible."

"Children are never whipped or scolded among the Zuni. They are completely free from any form of harsh discipline."

"Among white families a great deal of importance is attached to teaching children to obey. The Zuni, on the other hand, do not find it necessary to stress obedience. They show the child that there are some things which must be done for the good of everyone concerned, and by the same token they teach children that there are certain things they cannot do without making trouble."

No Threats to Kids.
"The Indian children have complete security in their relationship with parents and with the tribe. No one would ever think of threatening a child with the withdrawal of parental affection by saying 'mother won't love you if you are naughty.' Instead the child is told that 'people will think you are foolish if you act in such-and-such a manner.' Nor does the child ever have to fear being disowned or turned out."

"Although on occasion the child is threatened with sanctions, the source of the punishment is always shown to come from outside the family."

"Another factor in the Indian culture that differs with the conditions usually present among the whites is the prevalence of large families. A single Indian couple seldom has many children. However, since the families of brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, and indeed very often several generations of adults, live under the same roof, family life exists on a large scale. Children under this arrangement are constantly associated with a comparatively large number of adults. Thus the fundamentals of community life are learned early in the child's existence, he becomes attached to adults other than his parents, and rivalry between children is cushioned."

Mobile Port Earnings
Reach All-Time High
MOBILE, Ala. — Mobile's sea trade is doing all right. Highest earnings and heaviest tonnage in history have been reported for the last fiscal year for the Alabama state docks here.

Gross earnings of $1,090,418, net operating revenue of $525,927 and net tonnage of 1,742,377 were reported by C. E. Sauls in his annual report to Gov. Frank M. Dixon.

The report showed the increase was made in face of loss of business due to war in Europe.

Sauls also reported a total of $53,346.93 was spent during the fiscal year for additions and expansion of facilities.

Bureau Is Busy Before Deadline
Deputy County Clerk H. C. Finger and his staff at the Motor Vehicle Bureau office, have been busy people the last few days as car owners have hastened to renew registrations before the time limit expires.

Today is the last for use of the old 1939 license plates, and the office has been filled all day with people anxious to "get in under the wire."

An accurate check could not be obtained today, but it was estimated that the total given out so far was around 13,000 plates.

Chamberlain Says He Wants Harmony With U. S., Japan

Japanese steamer Asama Maru on January 20, Chamberlain said: "Nothing could more distress us than that the Japanese government or the people should feel that we have exercised our belligerent rights with any want of courtesy or respect for them."

Japan has formally protested to Britain over the incident and the subject now is under diplomatic discussion in Tokyo.

Chamberlain announced that a German submarine attempting to attack a convoy yesterday had been sunk by combined British air and naval forces.

The British war effort, he said, already has achieved "prodigious results," among them the stepping up of aircraft construction to a point "seven times that what it was in 1935-36," and the manufacturing of shells at a rate faster than in 1914.

Of neutral countries Chamberlain said Britain had no desire "to affront a neutral country with which we want to live in peaceful and friendly relations."

His audience recalled that Winston Churchill, the first lord of admiralty, had stated at Manchester Saturday that the odds were 500 to 1 against the Germans successfully attacking a convoy.

"Prodigious Results" The prime minister said that the British war effort already had achieved "prodigious results," with "upward of one and one-quarter million men under arms" and the navy protecting convoys "with such success that they were increasingly being made use of by neutrals."

The leader of the liberal opposition, Sir Archibald Sinclair, addressing another meeting, said that he shared Churchill's hope that the neutral nations would see the necessity of "uniting" for the defense of their liberties.

Chamberlain said that most of the sunken U-boat's crew were saved.

The prime minister said that since the war began Britain had placed orders for supplies costing nearly $200,000,000 (about $800,000,000), that the output in guns had doubled and in some cases quadrupled and that shells were being made faster than in 1914.

Furthermore, he said, aircraft construction is "seven times what it was in 1935-36." He added that 67 flying schools were being established in Canada and that fire-fighting services of ten times the peacetime strength had been established in vulnerable areas.

Scouting at German flights over coastal areas, Chamberlain said confidently: "We have not had any air raids yet, but we are prepared for them if they should come."

Chamberlain disclosed that Britain has arranged to purchase all of the empire's wool for the duration of the war and for a year thereafter.

He concluded his summary of Britain's war effort with the statement that "there is not a single non-belligerent country that feels itself threatened by this enormous accumulation of powers."

"We do not for one moment question the right of neutrals to decide whether they shall go into the conflict or stay out of it and in what fashion they shall use that neutrality they have chosen."

Chamberlain asked neutrals to consider that, though the exercise of belligerent rights causes them inconvenience and loss, "we have never sunk a neutral ship and have never willingly sacrificed a single neutral life."

Gibe at Secret Preparations Chamberlain began with a gibe at the secret preparations for Adolf Hitler's broadcast from Berlin last night, expressing pleasure at attending a meeting "neither the time nor the place of which you have found it necessary to conceal from the public."

Arrangements for Hitler's speech in the Sportpalast on the seventh anniversary of his chancellorship were kept secret until just before it began.

The battle of words has served as an obligato for intensified aerial warfare by Germany in which the British have acknowledged Nazi bomb and machine-gun attacks on more than 20 British and neutral ships, 18 of which, according to the German claim, have been sunk.

When Chamberlain last week chose today's luncheon of the national defense and public interest committee as the occasion for a speech, many Britons thought he did so with view to replying to a possible utterance by Hitler on the seventh anniversary of his birth to power in Germany.

Hitler spoke last night, declaring "England and France will get the fight they asked for." Daladier spoke Monday night, replying the French people for "the total war which cannot be long in breaking."

Since Chamberlain had not planned one of his regular war reviews for the House of Commons this week, it was taken for granted he would speak his mind on Germany's aerial thrusts of the last two days.

North Sea Casualties The North Sea continued to cast up new casualties of the quickening war in the air and on the waves.

Sixteen survivors from the sunken British steamer Giralda, 2,178 tons, were reported today to have drowned within a quarter-mile of land when their lifeboat capsized. The bodies were washed ashore on one of the Orkney islands.

Two lifeboats of the 1,487-ton British steamer Eston were washed ashore near a northeast port. The Eston and her crew of 18 were believed lost.

Other losses reported yesterday included the 8,501-ton British tanker Triumph, the 4,533-ton Collier Corydon, the trawler Agoma and the 2,881-ton British freighter Stanburn.

Twenty-six of the Stanburn's crew of 28 were lost.

Finns Smash Onward

Helsinki, Jan. 31 (AP)—The smashing of renewed Russian assaults at several points northeast of Lake Ladoga with the destruction of nine Russian tanks was reported today by the Finnish army communique.

Five Russian planes were said to have been downed in fighting yesterday.

About 50 Russians were killed at Taipale as Soviet thrusts along the Karelian Isthmus front were turned back.

The communique reported little other action, but unofficial reports asserted that the Finns had recaptured Pitkanen, an important city north of Lake Ladoga about 20 miles from the Soviet frontier.

Air activity was confined largely to the battle zones, the communique said, remarking that Soviet aerial forays consisted of only a few raids against Finnish territory.

Pitkanen was occupied by the Red army early in the invasion of Finland.

Its recapture was described as an effective gain in the encircling move against Russian divisions trapped in the Kiteles sector.

An observer from the Lake Ladoga front reported two of the Soviet divisions there had been without food more than a week, although they still had ammunition.

According to this source, the Finnish strategy now is one of waiting until the Russians run out of bullets, at the same time keeping up punishing thrusts against the Russian positions.

He said the Soviet offensive northeast of the lake had been technically broken for some time, but that the Finns, because of numerically inferior forces, must bide their time before taking full advantage of the victory.

The same informant said evidence had been found by the Finns that Russian dead were being disposed of through holes in the ice so as to conceal the extent of casualties.

Official sources said Soviet aerial activity Tuesday was considerably less than on Monday and was aimed chiefly at northern Finland, "where a few peaceful rural communities were bombed with slight material damage and three persons were reported wounded."

Hitler's Speech Is Seen as Heralding War to Utmost

stroyed a total of 18 vessels, nine Monday and the same number yesterday.

Today's high command communique, recounting Nazi raiders' achievements yesterday—when Adolf Hitler was promising the allies the war "they wanted"—said "again seven armed commercial ships were sunk" in addition to "two British patrol boats."

It also reported another ship "damaged severely and several lightly" and told of strengthening of Germany's defenses against enemy submarine raids.

Yesterday's communique reported "seven armed enemy merchant ships and two patrol boats were destroyed" by German airmen Monday.

(The British have named six ships sunk in the wave of offshore bombing attacks and told of numerous others that escaped destruction.)

Today's communique, which admitted the loss of only one German plane "despite the heaviest anti-aircraft defense by all ships that were attacked," said:

Major Seiler and Family to Easton

Major Fred W. Seiler, in charge of the Salvation Army headquarters in Kingston since June, 1934, has been transferred to Easton, Pa., and was busy packing up household goods this morning for shipment to Easton. He will be succeeded here by Adjutant Watson Hoffman, now at Easton, who is due to arrive in Kingston within a day or so.

Major Seiler said that he desired to thank the people of Kingston for kindnesses shown to himself and Mrs. Seiler and their four children during their stay here. He said that he had been glad to have the privilege of serving them and believed that things were better here than when he came five and a half years ago.

The major came to Kingston from Tarrytown and has been connected with the Salvation Army for the past 20 years.

Social Hygiene Group to Meet

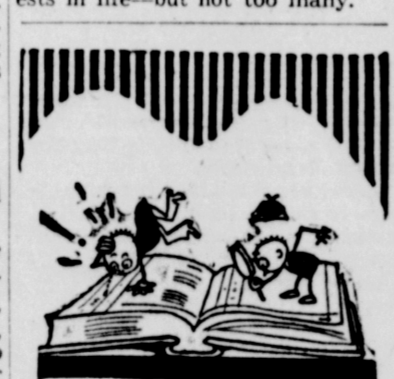

Community and national meetings planned for National Social Hygiene Day, February 1, have reached the 5,000 mark, Dr. Walter Clark, director of the American Social Hygiene Association announced today.

National Social Hygiene Day, sponsored by the National Anti-Syphilis Committee, is observed yearly throughout the country to review progress against syphilis and to map the campaign for another year.

Highlights of this year's event in Ulster county will be the fourth annual meeting of the Social Hygiene Committee of the Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health. It will be a dinner meeting held at the Y. M. C. A. in Kingston at 7 p. m.

Nearly 100 representatives of various organizations and leaders in the county and city have already made reservations. The public is invited and urged to attend for the program, which is scheduled for about 8 p. m.

Lent, Mrs. Irving Rathgeb, Mrs. Franklin Welker, Mrs. Fred Lewis Vail, Mrs. Philip Schantz, Mr. DuBois, William Barnaby, Miss Eliza Raymond, G. H. Mackey, Charles L. DuBois was acting chairman and the voting for trustees whose terms of office had expired was taken up. A. W. Lent's term as trustee had expired a year ago and that of Miss Raymond this year. In the election that followed in which Mrs. Rathgeb and Mrs. Vail acted as tellers, Miss Raymond was elected a trustee for a five year term and Mr. Lent for four years.

The reports of Mr. Mackey as secretary, treasurer and librarian were read and accepted. In the budget for this year the expenses are: Salaries of librarian and janitor, $876; sewer assessment, $15; water service, $21; fuel and light, $400; insurance, $33; miscellaneous supplies, $52; new books, magazines and supplies, $300. This totals $1,700. The income for last year was: Town of Lloyd, $1,000; interest on investments, $195.98; gifts, $14; miscellaneous receipts, $173.63; state grant for books, $100. The income amounts to $1,483.61. It is readily understood that the library needs association members and more income to carry on as an important feature of the village. The membership dues are $2 a year and this money has been voted toward the purchase of new books.

The library started in March of 1915 had 59 books and the first year that number was increased to 592, and in December 1939 had 7,341 volumes. The last librarian's report showed a circulation of 15,781 books. Book gifts during last year were 85 and new borrowers registered are 1,053; persons using reading room for reference and study for last year were: Adults, 1,048; juvenile, 2,916; total, 3,964. The efficiency record granted by State Education Department average above 88 per cent.

To Speak on Radio, Dr. J. S. Taylor, director of the Kingston City Laboratory, will be first speaker of a series on syphilis control over station WKNY tomorrow morning at 11:15 o'clock. Dr. Taylor will speak under the auspices of the Ulster County Social Hygiene Committee.

SEIZING OUR MAIL

Great Britain hasn't been conducting the war to suit us. Some Americans are disgusted at the lack of action. Many don't like the way the British navy delays our ships and searches our mails. We want them to fight only on their own side of the ocean, too.

A neutral in time of war has to be on the alert to defend its rights, so we'll keep on making strong official protests to any government that does anything to curtail them.

A great many people are wondering about the persistence of the British authorities in seizing and searching American mail en route from the United States to European countries, even the neutral ones, in violation of international law. True the British say that gold, and much other material valuable to the Nazi government is going through our mails, but any possible damage John Bull can do to Germany by searching our mails, and risking a reaction from American public opinion, seems to be all out of proportion.

As to the meaning of the international law on the subject there seems to be little question. It holds that the mails of a neutral country on the high seas are inviolable. Although our State Department has made vigorous protest the British doubtless are counting on the friendly feeling on the part of the American public toward the allies, in the present war, to preclude any sort of reprisal for the mail searching. They take the stand that the American public is so much opposed to Hitler that it will stand for a "mild" violation of international law in having our mail searched and seized for contraband on the high seas.

THE FREE WAY OF LIFE

One of the greatest evils of war is what it does to civilian minds. People at home may be more partisan than soldiers at the front. In adopting defensive measures they tend to suspend or destroy rights which civilization has fought long to establish.

When we get into a war, our constitutional "Bill of Rights" is handled roughly. Remember the World War, and how official or self-appointed censors started cracking down on free speech, free press, free assembly and a lot of other cherished rights? The rights were still there, unrepealed, in our basic law, but they vanished largely from current practice. And thereby freedom was crippled for years.

Things are better so far in this present war epidemic that seems to be sweeping the world. But it is an ideological war as well as a military war, and we are swept into the fighting area. And while we are fighting to preserve our basic liberties we need to be very careful, and struggle very hard, not to lose the most precious of them.

Freedom is not just something written in a constitution or printed in a book. It is a way of life that has to be practiced in order to survive. And people who interfere with other people's mental and spiritual freedom are in peril of losing their own.

FLOWERED ROADSIDES

A pleasant form of rivalry is given fresh impetus by announcement from Brownsville, Texas, that the lower Rio Grande Valley hopes soon to have "the longest flower trail in the country." Millions of bougainvilleas are being planted along the highways from Edinburg to Brownsville and Port Isabel and along other routes in that section.

The bougainvillea is a shrub which blooms there most of the year and is handsome and showy. Proud local residents believe their trail will compare well with the famous Azalea Trail of Mobile and the Oleander Trail of Galveston.

Highway planting is a fairly recent development. For a while the main idea was to get good roads built. Efficiency was the aim, not beauty. Today citizens know they can have both.

Roadside planting may be on the order of the trails named, or it may be varied. In an Ohio county a modern, divided highway has been planted with many different shrubs. Motorists may watch a continuing show of blossoms from early spring to late summer, with another show of berries, some of which last through the winter. In a Pennsylvania county the traveler in June is delighted with miles of climbing roses along the neat fences on each side of the highway. Variety and beauty may be achieved without hampering drivers' visibility or costing much.

FRANKLIN'S LOAN FUND

Even the wise Benjamin Franklin was unable to plan his philanthropy 150 years in advance. He set up a fund in Philadelphia that many years ago, supposedly for the benefit of young workmen. The restrictions imposed on borrowers have become so hard to fulfil that few loans have been made in the last fifty years.

Franklin stipulated that a borrower must be a "young married artificer" under 25 years of age. (An artificer was a skilled workman whose trade required an extensive period of training.) Further, the borrower must have served a regular indentured apprenticeship in Philadelphia, pay five per cent interest, borrow no more than $500, put up as security a first mortgage upon real estate in the city, and produce "two reputable citizens who will testify to his moral character."

There aren't so many fellows of 25 today who have had such an apprenticeship or can present such security. And the amount seems to be less than many borrowers need. The board of city trusts has recently succeeded in having a court change some of the provisions. Now the borrower may be skilled or unskilled, male or female. He may borrow as much as $3,000 at only four per cent interest.

It will be interesting now to see how much the fund is used hereafter.

The Japs are very mad about American objections to their "creating a new order in East Asia." A new disorder, we'd call it.

Those weird sounds you hear in all directions these winter evenings are just candidates keynoting.

Congress may forget about the Finns, and pass by on the other side, but the public doesn't.

We Americans love to sit in grandstand seats and criticise the countries that are doing the fighting.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

RAPID BEATING OF THE HEART

Naturally, if your heart, instead of beating 72 to 76 the minute, begins to beat 172, you would be alarmed. There is more than a feeling of discomfort as you wonder if the heart will not shortly wear itself out beating at such a fast rate.

These attacks of very rapid beating of the heart, which come on suddenly and leave just as suddenly, are called paroxysmal tachycardia — "tachy" meaning rapid and "cardia" the heart.

As a matter of fact, paroxysmal tachycardia is not a disease but just a symptom showing that something is interfering with the natural rhythm of the heart. Fortunately also, in most cases it is not a symptom of serious heart disease.

Drs. M. Campbell and G. A. Elliott, in British Heart Journal, London, report their study of 100 cases of paroxysmal tachycardia which they saw from 1925 to 1932. There were forty-one cases of heart disease. There was no heart disease (except this rapid beating), in the other fifty-nine cases, though quite was present in four of these.

The rate at which the heart was beating was between 140 and 240 in 90 per cent of the entire 100 cases. The attacks (paroxysms) generally lasted but a short time, lasting hours instead of days. In 61 the attacks usually lasted less than two hours and in another 28 the attack lasted 12 hours or less. There were four in which it lasted about 24 hours; in only seven was it longer than 24 hours.

The outcome as far as length of life is concerned in paroxysmal tachycardia is excellent except in certain cases of heart disease where the attacks occur late in life.

"Three of the patients of Drs. Campbell and Elliott lived fifty years after the onset of their paroxysms, another 18 for more than 20 years, and another 26 for more than 10 years, and most of them are still in good health."

There is no tendency for the attacks to become worse and physicians now are able to reduce the number and severity of the attacks.

I believe the above information about the outcome of most cases of paroxysmal tachycardia will be comforting to patients and to their families. Many such patients have lived in daily fear of collapse, and have made invalids of themselves because they thought they were afflicted with fatal heart disease.

Quinine (not quinine) is the usual treatment for this ailment.

It must not be forgotten, however, that some cases of true or organic heart disease have paroxysmal tachycardia as a symptom. Therefore, everyone with this symptom should have the heart examined and not take unnecessary chances.

Finland's Fate Has Put the American Government on the Spot As To Action

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 31.—Finland's fate has put the American government on the spot. Full of sympathy for the heroic fight being made by a free nation against the aggression of a dictatorship state, the Congress and the President want to do something to manifest America's interest. But how?

To extend financial aid for arms is considered unneutral or active participation in the war. To lend money to let Finland buy food is a sort of subterfuge because Finland needs airplanes and not food. To ask Finland to exchange her food credits given by the United States for war supplies bought or bartered abroad is to connive with Finland to violate the spirit, though not the letter, of American neutrality.

It is recognized that the United States loaned $25,000,000 to China in the midst of her war with Japan, and that technically Finland and Russia are not at war, so that it is not a violation of international law for the Washington government to lend to Finland money for food or airplanes.

But the whole problem revolves around a fundamental issue. Official Washington realizes that Finland is making a desperate stand against the onrush of Communism and that it is important for Finland to be helped because, if the allies cannot hold back Communism, then it may spread 'round the world.

The real difficulty is that neither the Republican nor Democratic leadership here wants to face that fundamental. They want Communism beaten back, but they do not want the American government involved in the accomplishment of that purpose.

The isolationists are thoroughly consistent. They, too, are sympathetic with Finland, but they insist America must not send any money through the government here, and that any aid extended should be by private citizens who shall give or loan funds. The Finns, on the other hand, think this is impracticable from the point of view of time. They must have financial aid before the snow is off the ground so that material assistance can be forthcoming.

The fundamental issue really isn't any different from that which faced Congress last September. If the Allies are beaten and the British fleet is destroyed, America is held to be in danger of being compelled to defend herself against a Fascist violation of the Monroe Doctrine. The defeat of Finland is, therefore, a vital part of the whole picture. So long as Russia and Germany are allied, some method of helping Finland halt the Russians is a part of the allied war strategy.

It is, therefore, asked here on all sides why Britain and France do not put credits at the disposal of Finland as they did for Poland and as they have done in the Near East. A few million dollars more or less out of the billions being sent by Britain and France can hardly be a consequential item.

The British and French do not need to donate or loan money—they can give airplanes and materials to the Finns. It is ten times more important for the British and French that Finland should succeed than it is for America to assure such a result.

In the final analysis, the big fundamental issue may have to be faced—whether the United States will come to the aid of Britain and France with money either raised by private subscription or by direct appropriation from the United States treasury. To create a precedent, at this time, of helping Finland may in itself furnish the justification.

tification for subsequent requests for aid for Britain and France. As public opinion stands today, there is no desire to enter the European war even with financial aid. The leadership in Congress may soon reflect that desire by letting Finland's plea go unanswered, though there is a rising public sentiment which evidently believes that lending money to Finland is not active participation in the war or an indifferent involvement.

If the administration were to permit the pending proposal to increase the funds that can be loaned by the export-import bank to be carried so that new money would go to Finland only, it might have a chance of passage. The possibility that Latin American nations will ask for loans, if there is no earmarking, is in the back of the minds of senators, who answer that Finland is in danger and Latin America isn't—at least not yet.

Finland is the unhappy victim of circumstances. Everybody here wants to help and yet stay out of the war. If Finland is beaten, the cause of democracy suffers a setback. But even larger in the background is the possibility that if England and France find themselves with their backs to the wall, America may be asked to send, not manpower, but money and materials. It's this contingency which really gives concern here, for it contains the fundamental issue that is being evaded on all sides by the politicians because they think isolationist opinion is at the moment stronger than cooperationist opinion.

Legislature Proposes

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP)—Employees who voluntarily quit their jobs would be disqualified—with few exceptions—for unemployment insurance benefits under a bill before the legislature today.

The only exceptions would be when a person is compelled to quit because of covert coercion by an employer or employer's agent or because of discriminating conditions.

"Primarily this measure is to prevent employees from going on many vacations or quitting periodically just to get insurance," said Republican Assemblyman Charles O. Burney, Jr., Erie county.

Other bills would:

Establish a maximum five cent bus and trolley fare for children going to and from school.

Appropriate $250,000 for a state aeronautics school in Richmond county.

Episcopal Church Group To Hold Meeting Tonight

Miss Lois Greenwood, the field worker for the Episcopal Sunday school committee of the board of religious education, diocese of New York, is holding a meeting at St. John's Church, Kingston, this evening at 8 o'clock for the clergy, superintendents and teachers in this district.

The proposed syllabus for the church schools in the diocese will be presented and discussed. This syllabus is not complete, and the board wishes to have suggestions made by the clergy, superintendents and teachers in the schools as to ways of improving it so that it will really be useful in forming standards for the schools throughout the diocese.

President Thanks Nation For Infantile Paralysis Aid

HALE AND HEARTY AT 58

This latest portrait of President Roosevelt shows him as he appeared in his office on his 58th birthday—when hundreds of thousands danced at birthday balls in his honor, contributing to the fight against infantile paralysis. Dr. Ross T. McIntire, personal physician to the President, said he was in as "perfect condition as any man of his age could be."

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—Hollywood stars turned the sedate national capital into a carnival town for a few hours last night as 15,000 persons set a gay pace for the country in celebrating President Roosevelt's 58th birthday anniversary.

For five minutes before midnight, the tumult was stilled while Mr. Roosevelt gave his "heartfelt thanks" to the millions who contributed dimes and dollars to the cause to which the celebration was dedicated—the fight on infantile paralysis.

His voice linking together for a moment all the estimated 25,000 parties in the nation, the President suggested that in future years the annual campaign might be extended "to the care of all crippled children."

"I think I am safe in saying," he added, "that no nation in the world ever has put a larger volunteer army into the field on any given date than the army of Americans which tonight is taking part in the defense of American childhood."

While he spoke from the quiet seclusion of the White House, Mrs. Roosevelt left a dinner party for a tour of six balls in the district and two in the suburbs.

Cheers welcomed the smiling Mrs. Roosevelt at every stop. Men and women stood on chairs and tables for a glimpse of her and the 19 stage, screen and radio celebrities who also made the rounds.

"I hope you have as good a time as you are giving others by coming here," Mrs. Roosevelt told one party.

Crowds gathered everywhere, straining against lines of policemen, firemen and marines. Hundreds waited outside each hotel entrance and stage door where James Cagney, Mickey Rooney, Pat O'Brien, Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour or Olivia De Havilland might be seen. An occasional autograph-hunter crashed the lines.

The biggest throng assembled at the Mayflower Hotel, attracted by Kay Kyser's band. The overflow spilled into lobbies, cafes and lounges. Dancing was almost impossible.

There Mrs. Roosevelt cut the first slice of a 312-pound cake. Slices were passed out to the multitude, and there was a lively scramble for them.

At two downtown theaters, box office lines for midnight shows featuring the Hollywood visitors ran out of sight around corners. After making 11 public appearances during the evening, the stars and capital social leaders went to a $25 gold plate breakfast at 2:30 a. m.—all except 11-year-old Gloria Jean, the singer.

In New York, the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, sliced a birthday cake from the kitchen of the renowned Oscar of the Waldorf. Chicago cheered its quota of celebrities. Omaha children shouted radio greetings to the President from an ice carnival. Indianapolis celebrated at 13 balls and two skating parties.

The President's proteges at the Warm Springs (Ga.) Foundation ate a special dinner.

The President cut his own cake, which had the customary Roosevelt family limit of 21 candles, at a party attended by some old cronies from the "cuff links gang."

State Highway Deaths Drop

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP)—New York's motor vehicle commissioner credits the "cooperative" spirit of motorists with last year's 12-year low record for traffic fatalities.

Despite the heaviest automobile travel in history, state highway deaths dropped 3.9 per cent to 2,429, the lowest mark since 1927. The total was 99 less than in 1938. Accidents totaled 73,442, a decline of 683, and 95,946 persons were injured, 472 less than the previous year.

Cold Weather During January

The last day of January was ushered in today with temperatures of 7 above zero, according to the official city thermometer, which registered a similar temperature on Tuesday morning with the highest point recorded Tuesday afternoon of 26 degrees.

January has been an exceptionally cold month with freezing temperatures prevailing with the exception of two days, January 14 and 15, when the city hall thermometer recorded lows of 32 and 34 degrees above zero.

During the month the official city thermometer has recorded but twice below the zero mark. On January 7 and 10, a recording of 1 degree below was reported. Elsewhere in the city, however, sub-zero temperatures were reported several times during the month.

The city engineer's records also show that during January there was a total rainfall of 2.04 inches and that the snowfall during the month was 7 1/4 inches. In December there was a fall of 2 inches, making the total snowfall so far this winter in Kingston of 9 1/4 inches.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

YESTERDAY: Kimball denies killing Joan Kent. Mrs. MacDonald admits digging with her daughter over Lathrop. Christine's spirits lighten, now that Dirck is on the scene.

Chapter 14

"Violent Person"

"HOW did you happen to move here, anyway?" Dirck asked me.

I gave him a five-minute talk on the advertisement in the paper, viewing the apartment, carefully omitting any mention of Toby, and finally moving in and its predicaments.

"Now isn't that just like you to be sitting on the sidewalk in the middle of the winter?"

I raised an eyebrow. "You seem to have a low notion, Mr. Kolff, about me and my doings."

"I've been hearing about you from Taylor ever since you got removed from boarding school for throwing spit balls."

"It wasn't spit balls," I said firmly. "Anyway, I thought I could trust Mr. Taylor. Aren't lawyers supposed to keep confidences?"

Dirck smiled. "I worried it out of him. You were a cute little kid."

He changed the subject abruptly. "Do you think Kimball got on well with his niece?"

"I believe so. I think he's grand."

Dirck nodded. "Every mystery must have its romance," he said gravely.

"My secret passion," I said just as gravely, "is the young man who guards the front door."

"Hm. The red-headed one?"

"Yes."

"Chris, I'm disappointed in you, falling for a cop."

"He's not a cop. I made inquiries. He's an assistant to the Sergeant of the Homicide Squad."

"If you wouldn't mind getting your mind off the boys for a minute, I'd like a little information. After all, if I'm to keep you out of jail I must know the facts."

I told him all I was surprised how many things had happened. When I finished he asked if I had any theories.

"I haven't one," I said very sorrowfully. "Being a spinster doesn't make me a detective. The mystery stories are all wrong."

"You're twenty-eight, I believe."

I shook my head. "Wrong again. I've reached twenty-nine so fast I've had to buy my hat going around the corners."

"How time flies."

"What I want to know, Mr. Kolff, is whether my good name is still under a cloud. And I told him what I heard the Sergeant say when I was going down the stairs."

"You don't look too stable," he said, "but I think my presence has reassured him a little. Taylor told me to take care of you while he was away, but I didn't realize what a violent person you are."

"You aren't taking it seriously enough to be a help to anyone."

"I'll try to protect you from red-headed detectives, at any rate," he said.

Taste In Girls

"THERE are a couple of things I've noticed, but doubtless, as everyone says, they have no bearing on the case."

He leaned back in the chair. "Shoot."

"I think the girl's mother knows more than she admitted, for one thing."

"You're right there," he agreed quickly.

And then I told him about the girls in the front apartment. "Mary Ann Rogers seems quite nice," I said when I finished.

He sat up. "Pretty?"

"Very! But I don't like the other girl. She was up to something last night, but I don't know what it was. But I'm very much afraid, Mr. Kolff, that she wasn't sleeping at home in her own little bed. But after all, I guess that doesn't mean she had anything to do with the murder."

Dirck was interested. "I'd like to have a talk with those girls. I suppose they are in."

I nodded. "None of us is supposed to leave."

"Anything else?"

"That's all, except the lighter."

I told him about that, then showed him my list of questions on the drawing board. He seemed more interested in the list than the missing lighter.

"If I were you," he said thoughtfully, "I'd leave the questions on the board just as they are in full view of anyone who might come in the room. It's just a chance that there is someone who's interested enough to keep a close watch on everything in the house."

"Young man," I said, "I'm no sissy, but I don't want people skulking around my apartment. That man last night nearly scared the daylight out of me."

Dirck shouted with laughter. "According to Mr. Kimball, the Sergeant is certain it was one of your boy friends. I've been in on a good many cases, but never before have I seen a respectable girl accused of such varied and grisly deeds. Lock your door at night by all means, but why not leave it ajar or at least unlocked, during the day? Unless you have valuables you're afraid might be stolen," he added with a twinkle.

"If I had any valuables," I said, "I wouldn't be living in this neighborhood. Painting water colors isn't as lucrative as it used to be. I'll leave the door unlocked, but I'm glad Taylor fixed up my window for me."

"Don't be morbid."

"It's because I haven't had any lunch," I said sadly. "They're pretty strict about letting us out of the house."

"My darling!" He got up. "I'm sure," he said as he poked through his overcoat pockets, "that I've got something in here for you."

"Chocolate cake, maybe, or chicken sandwiches?" I said hopefully.

He beamed as his hand struck something. He threw me a package. It was throat lozenges. I threw them back.

"Sit tight," he said. "I'll run in and talk to the girls in the front apartment, and then we'll feed you lavishly." He opened the door. "By the way, which one was I to fall for?"

"If you have any taste at all in girls or like a very interesting shade of red hair, you'll know which one."

Through The Window

WHEN Dirck finally did come back to my room it was after five and dark outside. I was sitting by the window, feeling at low ebb, with only the candle for light. I'd put the spare bulb in the bathroom to having and dress by, though I didn't have the energy to do anything about it.

Dirck said he'd been up to see Richard MacDonald, but before he had time to come in and tell me about it the Sergeant came upstairs and Dirck followed him into Joan Kent's apartment.

"All he can do is throw me out," he said cheerfully as he left. But he wasn't thrown out, and in a couple of minutes he called me in. The Sergeant was leaning at a perilous angle out of the window. He motioned to Dirck to close the door to the hall and then turned to me.

"Think carefully now," he said, very much excited. "After you went back to your own apartment last night, did you hear anything from the door, or any door, being open or closed?"

"No, I didn't. I'm sure I would have heard it, too, because I stood inside of my own door trying to lock it."

"Did you hear anyone in the hall directly after that?"

"Not for about twenty minutes. Then I heard someone come upstairs. It must have been the man who came into my apartment. After he left I heard the quarreling, and after that someone else came up from the first floor."

"That must have been Miss Rogers, the pretty red-haired girl," Dirck said. "She said she got back about twenty past twelve."

The Sergeant sat down in a large chair by the window. "God, I'm tired," he said, resting his feet on a footstool. "Now, Kolff, what I can't understand is, when left by the door, why you should think he left by the window. I'm still convinced that he waited until the coast was clear and then left by the stairs. There were no footprints in the snow outside, because that fool janitor turned us in time to clean the snow out of the side yard and the path to the garage this morning. If your idea is right, there would have been footprints. But I still stick to the stairs."

Dirck shook his head slowly and the Sergeant scowled.

"He might have opened the window," he went on, "so that the body would get cold and make it hard to determine when the murder was done. As a matter of fact, the girl was in her nightgown and ready for bed. Maybe she opened the window herself."

"It was too cold," Dirck said. "I don't think she'd have opened it until she was ready to get into bed. She'd have hardly been sitting there with the wind blowing over her and only a thin silk dressing gown on over her nightgown."

The Sergeant regarded him sourly. "It would take an athlete to get out of the window and swing down to the court."

"I don't think so," Dirck said. "The only difficulty to my mind was doing it with gloves on. It made it hard to get a grip on that drain pipe."

"Well, we'll try it out. I'll get Norton and maybe I can prove my point," the Sergeant said as he left the room.

Dirck was busy making some calculations on a piece of paper, so I looked around the apartment. It was a lovely room, perfectly furnished and arranged. You could get a pretty clear idea of the girl from her things; the dull blue rug, the chintz-covered chairs, a bowl of moss roses, now wilted, with the cold, on the drop-leaf table and on the low coffee table in front of the couch a collection of funny little carved wooden dogs. Poking out from a low footstool were a pair of small brown suede pumps, their round toes scuffed, and somehow pathetic.

Henry's simply in his glory. When his club, on Friday night, gathered round to hear the story of their brother's wit and might.

Henry's home is run by Henry. At least, that's what he'll tell you!

He comes and goes as he pleases. Does just what he wants to do!

All the other men are envious. They have never found a way to set their feet down as home-owners.

And successfully make 'em stay! But—as Henry's next-door neighbor.

I've found out, as neighbors do, that there's evidence a-plenty. That his stories aren't quite true!

I have heard his spouse proclaiming in a tone both loud and clear, "Henry! You'll be home by seven!"

And the answer: "Yes, m'dear!" When the summer heat was strangling, leaving lawns all dry and sore, I heard, "Henry! Weed the garden!"

And his panted "Yes, m'dear!" Now when yowling rends the night air, One is always sure to hear "Henry! Come and walk the trip-lets!"

And Henry's answer: "Yes, m'dear!" —D. Wilson.

There is always hope for anyone's future until ambition dies.

A man charged with murder bribed a friend on the jury to hold out for a verdict of manslaughter. The jury was out for a long time. At last they brought in a verdict of manslaughter. The prisoner rushed up to his friend and said:

Jury—Very. The other 11 wanted to acquit you.

Movies Houses of State Join in the Drive for Finns

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 31.—(Special)—Backing the nationwide program of the motion picture industry to raise a half million dollars to aid destitute civilians, New York state theatres have agreed to set aside February 17-18 as "Help Finland Days," J. D. Barnum, chairman of the New York Finnish Relief Fund committee, announced today.

"Independent operators and major exhibitors have assured Herbert Hoover, our national chairman, that at least 10,000 theatres in the nation are participating in the drive," Mr. Barnum said. "I have been in contact with the heads of the large circuits and independent owner associations in New York state and have been assured that our committee will receive full cooperation on 'Help Finland Days.'"

Many theatre managers have agreed to flash notices on the screen that the theatres are setting these days aside to give movie fans an opportunity to contribute to the drive. On these days two girls, attired in typical Finnish costumes, will be stationed in the lobbies of all participating theatres to receive donations. No collections will be made in the audience.

The girls will turn over all contributions to the theatre managers, who will forward their checks for the money to the state committee.

"From the assurances I have received already, I am sure the theatres in this state will more than fill their quota," said the state chairman. "It gives everyone who wants to contribute an opportunity to do so."

The rebuilding of the fire alarm system has been completed with the exception of a few minor adjustments on the board in fire alarm headquarters. These improvements have greatly improved the efficiency of the system, and provisions have been made to take care of future growth of the system. As the work progressed it was found that the need of an additional supervisory board was necessary, since no money was provided for the board in the original setup, something had to be done to make the installation of the board possible. Supt. Fire Alarm M. G. Miller solved the problem. He designed and drew the plans for the board. The plans were submitted to the Kingston Foundry Company, who are experienced in this line of work, having done fire alarm work for the city of New York. They bored the holes in the board as shown on the plan and made all the parts for switches, etc. The chromium plating was done at Phoenix, N. Y. Supt. Miller installed the parts and wired the board. The designing of the board, installing the parts, and wiring same was a very intricate piece of work, and to be appreciated should be inspected by the citizens of Kingston.

Volunteer Department

The school of training and instruction for volunteer firemen was inaugurated in Kingston in 1939. The course included fire department evolutions and lectures. The drill work was in charge of Deputy Chief Leverich, assisted by Fireman Sanford. Lectures were given by the chief. The school was very successful, the volunteer firemen took a keen interest in their work. The school will be opened again this year. The volunteer firemen render a valuable service to the city of Kingston. A service which is in a large measure overlooked, and due credit is not given these men who unselfishly give their service to the city. Appreciating this valuable and efficient work by the volunteers, I, as head of the firefighting force, extend to the volunteer firemen my sincere thanks for their cooperation.

The officers and members of the paid fire department have been faithful in the performance of their many duties, never shinking when called upon to face the numerous hazards which are always present at fires. The firemen have given full cooperation in special duty detail, giving many hours of their time off to this work. Cooperation of this nature keeps the morale of the department up to a high standard, for which I am thankful.

In conclusion I wish to extend my sincere thanks to the Honorable Mayor, C. J. Heiselman, board of fire commissioners and the sev-

Survey of Police Pension System Here by Committee

Following is a copy of a survey of the police pension system of this city, by the Pension Committee, which has been sent to Mayor Heiselman, Police Commissioners and the Board of Aldermen. The Freeman has been requested by the committee to print the survey.

Within the past year there has been considerable discussion concerning pensions throughout the state as well as in our city, and our committee feels that it is proper and timely to give a brief review to members of the findings of the State Pension Commission, who made an actuarial survey of the Police Pension Fund of the city of Kingston in 1933, so that they may be in a better position to understand its financial condition and be able to talk of its merits more intelligently with our many friends who have been so generous, year after year, in giving wholeheartedly of their support toward the maintenance of this fund.

This survey shows the assets and liabilities of this fund. It clearly shows what it cost to maintain the existing benefits to the present members on the force and those on the pension roll.

Liabilities	Assets
Liabilities	$165,922.00
Funds in hand	$ 31,066.00
Members' contributions	17,934.00
Income received from indirect sources as provided by the city charter:
"All the money collected and received annually from license fees and dog tax, fines imposed on members, one-half of rewards, donations, legacies, gifts and bequests, all lost or stolen money * * * and unclaimed property * * * shall be paid * * * to the treasurer of the board of trustees of the police pension fund without any action or authority of or from 'any other official body or officer'	89,995.00
	138,995.00

Accrued liability of the city to the fund.....$ 26,927.00

History of Liabilities

The history of accrued liabilities in every local pension fund dates back to the time when the fund was first created. The Kingston Police Department was established in 1891 with a membership of fifteen (15). The Police Pension Fund was created in 1910. At that time the membership had increased to seventeen (17). The city charter provided that all contributions of the members toward their pension fund began as of that date. Seventeen members then had from fifteen (15) to nineteen (19) years of service. The city did not require any of these members to make any additional contribution for their prior services, nor did the city set aside any moneys for the prior services of these policemen. So the Police Pension Fund of the city of Kingston had an accrued liability of from $75,000 to $100,000 at the time of its creation in 1910. Two years later, or in 1912, five of these policemen retired as provided by the city charter.

Cost of Maintaining Present Benefits

The report shows that the cost of maintaining the present is 5.97% of the pay-roll, or about $4,500.00 annually. It shows that the amount received from the members' contributions together with other sources of income to the fund in the past is 8.33% of the pay-roll, or about $6,600.00 annually. Thus the report shows that this "is more than sufficient to cover the rate of 5.97% of the pay-roll, which is required to maintain the existing benefits. This clearly shows that the fund has received about $2,100.00 annually, in excess of the amount it cost to maintain it. As a result of this excess revenue annually, the accrued liability of the fund at its creation, had been reduced, at the time the survey was made in 1933, to

And, the record shows for the past seven years, or since the survey was made in 1933, that the fund has continually received annually, far more than is required to maintain the present benefits.

Annual Receipts From 1933 to 1940

Year	Receipts
1933	$ 6,765.43
1934	7,376.15
1935	6,588.29
1936	8,309.58
1937	6,000.45
1938	11,939.49
1939	7,983.08
	$ 55,052.47

The survey shows that the cost of maintaining the present benefits is 5.97% of the pay-roll, or about $4,500.00 annually, or for seven years

Since the survey was made in 1933, the amount received in excess of the normal requirements to maintain the present benefits, and which is to be credited as an off-set against the accrued liability is.....$ 23,552.47

Leaving an accrued liability in the Police Pension Fund of the City of Kingston today of.....$ 3,374.53

The receipts in the past seven years show that the fund had an income of about $7,800.00 annually, which is about $3,300.00 annually in excess of what it cost to maintain the present benefits. At this rate, the accrued liability will be wiped out entirely within another year.

The Police Pension Fund has on hand today the sum of $52,380.24, which is an increase of $21,000.00 since the survey was made.

The financial soundness of our pension fund is due largely to the people of our city who have always taken a great interest in supporting and maintaining this fund without any tax burden. In fact, the first money which was raised for the police pension fund, was the result of a public subscription to a baseball game between the doctors of our city and the members of the police department in 1910, and since that time they have continued to manifest that same interest in this fund which they were responsible for creating.

The policemen of our city are indeed grateful to the people of our community for the interest they have always shown in our fund.

Our members desire to retain our present pension system and its benefits, because we feel sure, and the records show, that the pension fund is more than self-supporting and we have every reason to believe that it will continue to be so.

Plaintive Rhymster Advised To Keep Girl Waiting Next Time—It is Proper for Her To Arrive at Public Place After Man Does, But Not Too Long After.

Every now and then the usually serious questions sent me are broken into by comedy as, for example, in a certain young man's plaint. In spite of the collapse of his rhyme, there is plenty of reason for quoting these verses: Have you ever waited on the corner?

Of a cold and windy street For a lady fair, and one Whom you considered as quite "neat"?

Have you every waited with impatience Scanning each face as it drew near?

And then with a rush, to have her suddenly appear. "Oh! Have I kept you waiting long, my dear?"

If you have, then, my man, take a tip from me Next time you keep her waiting And see how she likes this way of "dating."

In answer to this and to all other protests sent me against girls (and women too) who keep their men friends waiting, I think the only answer is the one the rhymster suggests. I might go even further: Allow her so many minutes of grace. The number of minutes depending upon her rating for promptness. If a girl is usually prompt, then you know that something has happened to make her late and you wait until she comes or gets a message to you. But for the girl who is habitually late—to let her find

MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9310

Gay . . . witty . . . buoyant—the youth in you will eagerly respond to the charms of Marian Martin's Pattern 9310. Make it in printed crepe for spring and in colorful cotton for later. The side sections of molding bodice end in low points, while the center bodice runs right down into the paneled skirt in one easy piece. Notice how the back waist seam is pointed for a flattering line. You'll like either buttons or bows for trim, with perhaps a lacy edging for feminine appeal. A dark-and-light mixture might be striking, with the darker fabric forming the center bodice section, the skirt and the sleeve tabs.

Pattern 9310 may be ordered only in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and 3¾ yards lace edging.

Fluorescent Lighting Has 'Daytime' Effect

Fluorescent lighting, already widely used in stores, art museums, theaters and restaurants, will open up a hitherto untapped field of decorative colored lighting in the home of tomorrow.

So prophesies a prominent United States lighting consultant.

With fluorescent lighting augmenting, but not necessarily rivaling the present type of incandescent lamps, may look for them to go hand in hand with each other in the homes of the future to achieve that warm daylight effect which best brings out the shades and tints of home furnishings. Architects, builders already are beginning to appreciate the possibilities of fluorescent lighting in the home.

Because a daylight effect can be achieved easily with fluorescent lights, they are especially effective in lighting bathroom mirrors, for example, where makeup can be applied to look as it will look in the light of the day.

Artificial windows, covered with fluorescent lighting, and for unusual lighting effects in halls and living rooms. They are proving acceptable for work surfaces such as tables or desks.

Fluorescent light is achieved by forming invisible ultra-violet light into visible light by means of chemicals. The chemicals are sprayed on the inside of the lamps, and by the proper proportion of chemicals, various colors can be obtained. The lamps are available in the following standard daylight, white, gold, red, pink and green.

New lamps are more efficient, using white light, for example, using one-third the electrical energy required for ordinary lamps. Colors as blue and green, fluorescent lamps are up to 30 times as efficient as the incandescent variety.

Fluorescent lamps have a longer life and the colors endure for years of the bulb, but the cost of installation is higher since the equipment has not yet reached the mass production stage. The lamp itself costs approximately 30 times as much as an incandescent type does now, and must have its own operating mechanism, which sells for about $50.

X-Rays of Old Paintings Help in Detecting Frauds

An exhibit of specialized X-ray films at Harvard university shows that several paintings, traditionally attributed to the Flemish master, Rembrandt, may really have been the work of his pupil, Ferdinand Bol.

One disputed picture, a portrait of "Saskia," the underpainting of which experts believe Bol may have done that part of the work and Rembrandt finished it. The shadowing shows that Bol's underpainting was actually more crude and less detailed than the master's.

Rembrandt has more than 3,200 X-ray pictures of paintings and they are expected to help in detecting forgeries, determining authorship of works, and discovering whether they have been touched up.

The study reveals that the "Vision of St. John" was painted about 1700, and that years later a pillar and angel were added. An angel was added to the Fifteenth Century picture, "Annunciation to the Shepherds," of Her Approach.

The X-rays also reveal how artists change their minds while painting—ranging figures or changing the form of the work-in-progress.

Wallpaper's Varied Uses

Wallpaper's primary use is as a covering for the walls, but there are many other functions this material can serve. Manufacturers are promoting the use of wallpaper as a covering on the basis that it substitutes decorative interest for the white "nothingness." Rooms in unity and effectiveness, they say, by the use of an appropriate wall paper blending into the walls. The interior of cupboards or the opportunity for effective wall paper use. Modern paper designs from excellent backgrounds for character and color scheme of the room. Colors are now being wallpapered, rather than to contrast with it. Unfinished plaster closets appear bare and incongruous when closet doors are left open.

Experts Think Godoy Will Give Louis Lots of Trouble

College Court Features Tonight

New York, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Yale-Princeton struggle for the Eastern Intercollegiate League lead and the "metropolitan championship" doubleheader at Madison Square Garden aren't just the highlights of tonight's eastern basketball program—they're practically the whole thing.

Princeton broke into league competition last Saturday with a decisive victory over Cornell. Yale, with two victories and one defeat, shares second place with Dartmouth, defending champion.

The Tigers have the advantage of playing on their home court, where they have lost only one of four games this season. They have one outstanding sharpshooter, Johnny Meyerholz, and a fair supporting cast. They have been beaten four times in ten starts, but the only eastern team to do the trick was Army in Princeton's first game after a two-week lay-off.

Princeton has a second league game on schedule this week, playing Dartmouth at Hanover Saturday.

The Garden doubleheader matches the unbeaten New York University team against St. Francis and Manhattan against St. John's. N. Y. U. is generally rated the best team in the city, with only Long Island University disputing the Violets' claims. L. I. U. doesn't play in the "championship" series. N. Y. U. has won nine games so far. St. Francis has beaten seven of nine college rivals. The Violets may be in for trouble tonight, for they have lost three members of their squad. Art Schilling has been declared ineligible, and Frank Turner has a bad knee. Off the records, St. John's figures to have a big edge over Manhattan in the other contest.

Other major games tonight pit much beaten Georgetown against Army and once-beaten Duquesne against little St. Vincent in the Dukes' first game in two weeks.

Finnish Women and Children Need Your Aid. Make Your Contribution to Finnish Relief Fund Now.

For the first time since 1923, when Angel Luis Firpo sought to wrest the heavyweight title from Jack Dempsey in their memorable Polo Grounds battle, a South American will make another attempt to annex that crown when Arturo Godoy, formidable Chilean challenger, opposes Joe Louis at Madison Square Garden on Friday night, February 9.

For Louis this marks his ninth title defense since he won the honors from Jim Braddock at Chicago in 1937. And many ring experts believe it will be the hardest fight yet in defense of that title.

U. S. boxing fans remember Godoy best for his two impressive victories over Tony Galento on his last trip here two years ago. The South American trounced Galento in ten rounds at the old New York Hippodrome and then repeated that triumph in the semi-final to the Louis-Braddock fight in Chicago. Both these battles were of the Pier Six variety, Godoy fighting Galento at his own game—rough-house stuff—and beating him at it.

In preparation for next week's titular contest, Godoy has been training for more than two months. He arrived in the States from Chile early in December, spent a few days in New York and then left for Madame Bey's camp in Summit, N. J., where he has been working out daily under the eye of White Binstein, noted fight trainer, and his manager, Al Well, who already pilots Lou Ambers, world lightweight champion, and Joey Archibald, world featherweight king.

Louis, well aware that his title is in distinct jeopardy when he faces the rough and rugged Chilean, has also been working out for weeks. He spent close to a month at his dude ranch in Michigan, doing preliminary work, and then came east to establish his quarters at Dr. Bier's camp in Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he has conditioned himself for most of his eastern appearances.

Tickets for the heavyweight title bout are on sale at the offices of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, 1619 Broadway, New York city, and at Madison Square Garden.

Quotes Figures On 'Paid Athletes'

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP)—Commissioner John L. Griffith apparently is a little weary of all this loose talk about paid athletes inside and outside of the Western Conference. He did his bit yesterday toward clearing up the situation in his own circuit by giving out figures which showed conference athletes collected $300,000 the last two school years in scholarships and payment for odd jobs.

Griffith said the basic principle of the Big Ten in regard to aiding athletes is that the athlete is entitled to every "consideration which might be accorded a non-athlete by the university, but no more."

In 1938-39 Big Ten athletes received $46,440.34 in scholarships, $33,541.26 in loans and $114,512.69 for employment. Exclusive of the loans, which must be paid back, the athletes drew down $299,305.19 for the two years.

For Chicago, which no longer has a football team but supports a larger-than-average minor sports program, led in the amount of aid—$34,550.50.

Mack Sure McCoy Will Add Spark

Philadelphia, Jan. 31 (AP)—You would think to hear Connie Mack talk that the acquisition of Benny McCoy has given the 77-year-old manager of the Athletics a new lease on life.

Imbued with the nation that a championship team will once again hold forth in Shibe Park, Connie is sure McCoy will provide the rejuvenating spark.

McCoy, a $45,000 investment at 22, is going to play second base and occupy a "key position in the batting order."

And Benny cut audit from the Detroit Tigers by edict of Baseball Commissioner Landis, "glad to be settled again."

"Maybe I got a better break than I deserved," observed the young infielder, adding that he intended to salt away a good part of the $45,000 bonus and two-year $10,000 annual salary involved in the deal.

Mackian optimism imparted zest to a dinner of Philadelphia sports-writers last night.

"I'll go out on a limb and predict that the Yanks will finish third in the American League this year," he said with eyes twinkling.

Patty Berg Back In Miami Tourney

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP)—Favorites face a busy day in the Miami Biltmore's golf tournament. Two 18-hole rounds are on the program.

Patty Berg of Minneapolis, returning to competition after a seven-month layoff due to an appendectomy, was matched with Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs, Ga., in the morning round. She fired a four under women's par to defeat Mrs. Richard E. Jarrett of Philadelphia, 9 and 8, in yesterday's opening round.

National Champion Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., who shot four under par to dispose of Mrs. George E. Wilcox, Jr., of Miami, 6 and 4, faced Mrs. Leon Solomon of Memphis, Tenn.

Miss Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, firing a five under par to eliminate Mrs. H. D. Sterrett of Hutchinson, Kas., faced Ellamae Williams of Winnetka, Ill.

Cage Coach Has 1,000 Victories

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 31 (AP)—Ernest Blood, 68-year-old basketball mentor, looked back tonight on a record of 1,000 court victories, but just "couldn't see anything to get excited about."

His latest pupil, the St. Benedict's prep quintet of Newark, reached that mark for Blood-coached teams last night, coming from behind in the last two minutes of play to defeat St. Peter's High School, 23 to 22.

Blood started his coaching career 49 years ago as a Y. M. C. A. instructor.

Car Stolen From Milton Monday Night Recovered

Investigating a report to the sheriff's office that a DeSoto car had been standing for two days along the road running from the east end of the bridge over the Rondout to South Rondout, Deputy Sheriff Arthur Brown found that the car was registered in the name of Claude Hepworth of Milton.

Inquiry showed that the car had been stolen Monday night from alongside the Hepworth residence, where it was parked, but the loss had not been reported to the sheriff. Fortunately the car had not been damaged.
